“When you are working on something, don't dwell too much on the result. I think that the process is the most important. We put in our best, and when there are difficulties, we tackle them head-on and try to solve them. Try our best to find solutions instead of avoiding the problem. And as for the result, I believe the hard work put in would reward us in the end.” - Xiao Zhan (translated)

Registering for Traditional Model of Learning (MOL)
